A Selection of Book Arts and Design Bindings

1. Amichai, Yehuda [poet]; Black, Rick [artist]. The Amichai Windows. Arlington, VA: Turtle Light Press, 2017. Limited Edition. Tight, bright, and unmarred.

Numbered limited edition, this being 6 of 18 copies. Printed on handmade paper with deckled edges, with gold leaf highlights and blind embossments in some of the designs. The collection of triptychs and a 28 page guide are housed in a box enclosure shaped like a Jerusalem window. Fine in Fine Archival Box. Hardcover. (#10483)

$9,500.00

A compilation of 18 unbound triptychs and a catalogue inside a double drop-spine enclosure. The work explores love, war, and being Jewish in the 20th century. Amichai's work, often considered for the Nobel Prize in Literature, explores family, love and war. Black, having fallen in love with Amichai's poetry, spent ten years creating this remarkable work. Blending of some of Amichai's original, handwritten poems with collaged images of Jewish history and life drawn from archives around the world.

Aharon Yermiyahu Taub, in his review for the American Jewish Libraries newsletter, stated; "a towering achievement in American arts and letters, the culmination of a decade of reflection, research, translation, and artistic imagination and a breathtaking exploration of literary and visual poetics." [AJL. News, Feb/March 2018, Vol. VIII, No. 1]. Recent winner of the Isaac Anolic Jewish Book Arts Award.

"Almost every aspect of The Amichai Windows is symbolic. From the simulacrum enclosure of a Jerusalem window to the texture of papers that evoke Jerusalem stone, from the olive green color meant to evoke the Jerusalem landscape to blind embossment of a Jewish star—I am always evoking meaning in a multiplicity of ways.

Over the past ten years making The Amichai Windows, I wanted people to experience this artist book not only by reading the poems but by lifting a curtain, handling the papers, touching the blind embossment. Aside from playing with the visibility of images in a window, I am also toying with the materiality of the book itself.

I spun my own metaphors out of Amichai's poems. I also mirrored Amichai's own process of combining images from different places and time periods in my collages. These multi-layered spreads—which include letterpressed poems, blind-embossed images, gold leaf, tipped-on papers and botanicals—function like dreamscapes, thus creating additional layers of meaning.

In addition, you'll see a torn bit of super, the fine mesh that helps from the spine of a book. I am using the bookmaker's material as a metaphor for the burning of books that occurred in Nazi Germany. I am also toying here with the word itself, "super," and the idea of racial superiority.

I hope The Amichai Windows will resonate deeply for you." [Artist statement]

2. Belloff, Mindy. Recreation of the Declaration of Independence as designed & printed in 1777 by Mary Katharine Goddard [Together with] Edited Version of the Declaration of Independence: All People Are Created Equal. New York: Intima Press, 2010. Limited Edition. Bright and clean. Document 21x16" printed in 2-color black and brown; Essays 21x16" printed in blue and red; inside an archival paper folio; hand set in Caslon & letterpress printed on handmade cotton & linen paper (paper custom made by Katie MacGregor, Maine). Limited edition of 100 copies. Fine in Fine Portfolio. Broadside. (#8916) $1,500.00

"Setting the Declaration in type was enlightening in many ways, as my thoughts throughout the process were of Mary Katharine in her print shop during the cold month of January, not having 21st century amenities. I could not help but wonder how Mary Katharine must have felt being entrusted to print this stunning proclamation while setting each letter of the text 'all Men are created equal.' Therefore, on July 4th, 2010, I went to press on a second unambiguous edition proclaiming 'all People are created equal'," explained Mindy Belloff.

"Mary Katharine was an incredibly brave woman for her time. By her actions, she was clearly a pioneer for women's rights and freedom of the press." (Artist statement)

In January 1777, Congress commissioned Goddard to print the Declaration for each of the 13 newly formed colonies. This was the first printing to reveal the names of its signers and the first titled the Unanimous Declaration. Goddard, Postmistress of Baltimore and publisher of a weekly newspaper, put herself at risk for treason by printing the document and adding her name at the bottom.

To honor Goddard, an American pioneer, and our founding fathers, Intima Press created an accurate reproduction of Goddard's elegant two-column design of the Declaration, hand set over 7,000 characters in the original Caslon typeface, and printed on paper made specifically for the museum quality re-creation. She then went to press on a second unambiguous edition proclaiming 'all People are created equal' instead of 'all Men.'

Introductory text by Harvard historian David Armitage with essay by historian Martha King, and by the Artist.

3. Bradbury, Ray; Fontcuberta, Joan [artist]. Fahrenheit 451 [Artist Book]. México: Troconi-Letayf & Campbell, 2020.

Limited Edition. Tight, bright, and unmarred. Presentation: Walnut box container showing an original book burned by the artist, protected with an acrylic cover. Size: 40 x 28 x 11 cm Contents: 12 photographs numbered and signed by the artist in archival quality digital print on Natural Rag Entry paper of 290 grams of MOAB, 100% cotton, in a size of 36 x 25 cm.

1 book with texts by the author and photos that document the text itself and the burning action, bound in cartoné with seams for loose sheets.

1 evidence bag with the burned book ashes. 1 metal box with a USB stick that shows the action of the books burning. Multi-faceted work, including sculptural, photographic, digital, and printed elements. np. Illus. (color plates). Numbered, limited edition of 20 copies, signed by the artist. Fine. Mixed Media. (#10522) $7,500.00

"Through the Fahrenheit 451 project, Joan Fontcuberta carries out the symbolic action of burning 451 copies of the famous novel of the same name, in various languages. Unlike Bradbury's argument, in this case, the books are not totally destroyed by the flames but rescued before turning to ashes. On the occasion of the commemoration of the author's centenary, the Bradbury Year (2020), and in the words of Joan Fontcuberta, the current reality begins to look dangerously like this great dystopic novel..."

"The novel Fahrenheit 451 is the one that best indicates the inverse dependence between the culture of books and totalitarianism, a totalitarianism that is no longer a distant ghost but a reality manifested by the rebirth of the extrema right in Europe and Spain In 'Fahrenheit 451' the victims are the books, which are the access routes to cultivated intelligence, knowledge and free thought. "The books in this portfolio of work are victims of the flames, but they are also survivors. Despite the violence they suffer, they endure, albeit with sequels and scars. "The censorship is definitely not consummated, but the burned covers testify to the damage of the aggression".

"The edition consists of a certificate of authenticity signed by the artist. In his new project Fahrenheit 451, Fontcuberta aspires to participate, from the frontlines of art, in this dissolution of frontiers, paying homage to books based on various manifestations of intolerance and barbarism, from a supine paradox: "burning books which deal, precisely, with burning books. To this end, I assembled as many copies of Bradbury's novel as I can, in a vast plurality of different editions and languages, which reveal its ecumenical and popular condition". " [Publisher's Statement] Housed in a clamshell box covered with black buffalo skin with onlays of handmade moon paper and scribble paper; center onlay is covered in black calfskin and blind tooled; trays covered in handmade moon paper and lined with handmade mottled purple paper; box is wrapped in handmade olive colored paper with coyote foot bone. "The tale of 2001: A Space Odyssey was a collaboration between Arthur C. Clarke and Stanley Kubrick. Therefore the design takes cues from both the text and the film as a nod to this collaboration.

Clarke divides his epic telling of human evolution into six parts. For my binding of this novel, I wanted to recreate each part as a tactile experience while the viewer moves through the enclosures and into the binding.

Beginning with the earth-toned wrapper, which includes a bone to signify the discovery of tools and how they might benefit as weaponry. Peeling away the wrapper reveals the clamshell box and the moment in the story when the mysterious monolith is unearthed by modern man on the moon.

back cover to highlight the bleakness Dave felt once the ship's life support, HAL, murdered his entire crew and attempted to do away with him as well.

In an attempt to save himself, Dave flees from the empty ship and enters the final stages of his evolution. This is communicated by the interior side of the boards, flyleaves, edge decoration and endpapers. In his escape pod, Dave enters a space with gaping black shafts filled with squares, triangles and polygons before emerging into a white space peppered with a myriad of tiny black specks overhead. Dave ends this portion of his journey in a room where the objects seem familiar but at closer inspection deemed poor replicas. Dave calls out how two paintings hung on the walls are quite blurry yet recognizable. These two paintings are Van Gogh's Bridge of Arles and Wyeth's Christina's World. I altered and cropped these paintings for the endpapers to be the final visual representation of the book before getting to the actual text." [binder statement]

That statement continues to drive and define the work of Bulletspace.

Extraordinarily strong exploration of immigrant life. "This one was my first artist book Caxixis-New York: a parallel between street fairs in New York City and a remote small town in northeast Brazil. The photographs taken as soon as I came to New York reflect the psyche of my first moment arriving abroad, and having learned to look at the world that way, I assigned myself the task of incorporating this quality of otherness to my own origins. Shown side by side, these two essays form a parallel between street fairs in New York City and a remote small town in northeast Brazil.

The resulting body of work resulted in a solo show in my native city; this book was a companion piece. Having no bindery at home, it was made in my mother's kitchen using whatever materials I could find around. The hand of the maker sure shows: the original 35mm images were acrylic-medium-transferred to the pages. It is a low-tech process that involves vast amounts of rubbing. In addition, a few of the images were silk-screened.

A book dealer asked me to get together some ephemera related to the show – that was when I realized: I have been doing this for so long, now there is even history to it..." [Artist Statement]

"One day, to everyone's astonishment, someone drops a match in the powder keg, and everything blows up."
[James Baldwin]

"Newark 1967: A Narrative in Black and White was produced by Maureen Cummins during the summer and fall of 2020, with typographic assistance from Kathleen McMillan. The project, which began as historical research during the months before the COVID-19 outbreak, quickly became, in the aftermath of the killing of George Floyd and Black Lives Matter protests across the country, a surreal parallel to the racism of our time. The events in Newark that Cummins set out to document arose out of decades of discrimination—in housing, education, and government, not to mention longstanding police brutality—all of which culminated on the night of July 12, 1963. When a black cabby, John Smith, was seen dragged into police custody and rumored to be dead, an angry crowd of residents gathered outside the precinct, and violence broke out. What followed was five days of mayhem—businesses looted, buildings in flames, and crossfire from multiple armed forces—that left 26 people dead and hundreds injured.

Driven by her own family's story of white flight from Newark, Cummins began her research by making weekly trips to the city, first to the New Jersey Historical Society, then to the Charles F. Cummings Center for New Jersey Information, housed in the Newark Public Library. Both resources provided a treasure trove of information: books, maps, protest fliers, news clippings, autopsy reports, transcripts of eye-witness accounts, and press photographs. What the artist did not expect to discover, six months into the project, was the way in which her research would come to life before her eyes: in Minneapolis and other cities across America, scenes from Newark's racist playbook were repeated again and again: in the form of en-forced curfews, food shortages, tanks in the streets, attacks on unarmed citizens (by police, military, and armed militias), references to snipers, outside agitators, "insurrection," "left-wing radicals," and clarion calls for "law and order."

Newark 1967: A Narrative in Black and White reads as history, memoir, current events, and cautionary tale. The text of the book is comprised of ten stories, most of them a chorus of voices, many dramatically different: "The Newspaper Stories," "John Smith's Story," "The Activists' Story," "The Law Enforcement Story," "The Black Survival Story," "The Firemen's Stories," "The Eyewitness Stories," "The Grand Jury Story," "The Mother's Story," and "My Father's Story."

On facing pages, images of events transpiring people. on the ground are viewed through cutout openings within quiet-seeming domestic scenes. In this way, two realities are depicted: black and white, "high" and "low," the protected and the targeted. Within the pages of the book, which mimic newspaper stories and photos, the artist uses color to comment on color: while the white characters are foregrounded and printed in bold black ink, the black characters are viewed from afar—ghostly, barely there, an allusion to Ralph Ellison's "Invisible Man." A closer read of both sets of photos, however, reveals a more nuanced and parallel story: the double meaning behind the phrase "domestic unrest." [Artist statement]

All text and imagery in

*"Newark 1967: A Narrative in Black and White was silkscreen-printed onto Schaeffer Graphic Board, with laser cuts by Sarah Pike of Freefall Laser. The book was bound by Lisa Hersey using hand-dyed Yukuushi paper for spine-lining and hinges. Period photographs of Cummins and her family are from the artist's personal collection. All original press photographs have been reproduced by kind permission of the Associated Press and The Newark Star Ledger, with the exception of the images facing The Grand Jury Story and The Black Survival Story, which are believed to be public domain." 9. Flusser, Vilem; Maltez Novaes, Rodrigo [trans]; Feinstein, Samuel [binder]. The History of the Devil [Design Binding]. Minneapolis, MN: Univocal Publishing, 2014. Limited Edition. Tight, bright, and unmarred. Full black leather binding, endpages with Diane Bond handmade paste paper, fore-edge and tail decorated with graphite, head decorated with graphite and 22K moon gold; leather headbands with silk wrapping, boards covered in black Harmatan goatskin leather, infilled turnins, in blind tooling with a multi-faceted hexagon tool cut by the binder, gilt tooling in moon gold; archival cloth clamshell box, printed spine label, ultrasuede lining [detailed treatment description laid in]. 8vo. 218pp. Signed binding. Fine in Fine Archival Box. Hardcover. (#10275) $2,500.00

"Flusser's History of the Devil takes us through a wild ride of what the Devil is, how humanity is influenced, governed, and seeks to make sense of the world, and uses the seven deadly sins (in six chapters: Lust, Wrath, Gluttony, Envy & Greed, Pride, and Sloth and the sadness of the heart) as the lenses of exploration. For Flusser, the Devil is the Promethean qualities that push forth history and progress, and exploring the symphony of civilization, "all the progress of humanity against the limits imposed on us by the divine, and our daily struggles for the Promethean fire of freedom, is nothing but the majestic work of the Devil." I wanted to make a tactile binding to pay homage to the structure of good and evil explored, and how Flusser structures his arguments, with a multi-faceted, six sided tool comprising six pillars on the binding, representing each of the chapters of the deadly sins. The endpapers and edge decorations touch on the chaos that humanity has caused in search of meaning. I'll end here with the first sentences I read of this book that I just happened to pick up and flip to, which drew me into Flusser's world: "In order to devour nature, it is necessary to cut it up into slices. Not even gluttony can devour the whole of nature in one gulp."

10. Heebner, Mary. Silent Faces / Angkor. Santa Barbara, CA: Simplemente Maria Press, 2013. Limited Edition. Minor bur to box, else bright and clean. Box, printed and bound volumes, metal tray, four scrolls. Numbered limited edition, this being 17 of 25 and signed by the artist. Fine in Near Fine DJ. Mixed bindings. (#9912) $8,500.00

"Silent Faces / Angkor is a book that grew out of artist Mary Heebner's visit to the temple complex of Angkor in Cambodia. While there she made sketches and took photos of the ancient stone carvings on the temple walls and later created a series of collages and paintings based on these images. From those artworks, Heebner developed this multi-faceted, multi-media book.

This work comprises a box of straight-grained red cedar with two hinged lids inside of which is a metal tray with a bronze patina that holds multiple volumes. The first is Silent Faces: Angkor which contains Heebner's thoughts and poetic reminiscences of her trip to the temple complex accompanied by photographs and letterpress illustrations. This volume is bound with a black leather spine and printed paper-covered boards.

Also in the metal tray is a hand-painted paper chemise containing two accordion fold books. Asparas of Angkor contains eight letterpress illustrations of celestial spirits called asparas which are based on sketches Heebner made at the temple complex. The Churning of the Sea of

Milk contains the artist's interpretation of the myth of the same name. Both of these volumes feature a deeply debossed water motif.

Finally, the third volume included in the metal tray is a booklet of handmade paper with deckled edges containing the colophon and information about the project. The pages of this booklet feature two watermarked illustrations of asparagus. Underneath these volumes are four large hanging scrolls with prints of photo-based collages from the artist's Geography of a Face: Khymer series which explores the faces of the sandstone carvings at Angkor. These scrolls are made of handmade abaca and linen paper watermarked with a pattern drawn by the artist and milled at the Dieu Donné Paper Mill in New York. They are finished with hand-wrought metal finials and a braid with beads of quartz, amber, copper, and glass.

The complex design of the entire project and original artwork upon which it is based were made by the artist. The volumes in this work were letterpress-printed in Spectrum by John Balkwill of the Lumino Press who also completed the bindings. The box design was created with the assistance of Tomio Muneno of Muneno Woodworks and built by Dennis Ito. The designs for the metal elements were created with the assistance of David Shelton of Shelton Design with production work by Joe Shelton." [from the artist]

"Mary Heebner's mixed-media collages on handmade paper combine references to antiquity with fragments of color and biomorphic forms. Her meticulously built-up images incorporate painting, charcoal, powdered print, rags, earth, and an extremely wide variety of handmade paper—among other materials. The compositions include quotes taken from classical sculpture and placed in fields of color evocative of landscapes. "Fragments, both literal and metaphoric, are also vital to my process. Through a parsing out and weaving together of fragments—of histories, stories, objects—people fashion narratives that are personal, collective, cultural, mythic." Heebner believes her process of fragmentation and juxtaposition mirrors the way in which people construct and interpret realities."

Airbrushed paper fly leaves. Original dust jacket bound with book block. 8vo. 333pp. Fine in Fine Archival Box. Hardcover. (#10478) $2,250.00

"The events in story spiral wildly out of control with razor sharp wit and I wanted to play on the title with a whimsical cover. I have a huge jar filled with used razor blades from a machine that I use to pare leather and decided to secure these onto a leather cover. The leather staple binding style is a throwback leather bomber jackets and embossing the leather with sandpaper is a nod to the sand selling scheme in the story." [artist statement] Coleen Curry is a contemporary design binder. Since she bound her first book in 2003, Coleen's aim is to craft technically evocative bindings that provide a visual, sensual, and tactile experience. In 2009, Coleen received her Diploma in Fine Binding from the American Academy of Bookbinding (AAB). In addition to teaching at the American Academy of Bookbinding, Coleen has led workshops in leather and stone binding as well as leather dying and surface treatments since 2014. She is past President of the Hand Bookbinders of California and a current Board member of the San Francisco Center for the Book. Her work has been widely exhibited internationally and has won several awards. Coleen's work is held in private and public collections, such as the Bancroft Library, Boston Athenaeum and Bainbridge Museum of Art. Coleen is Canadian and lives on the California coast where she crafts design binding, and in her free time, swims and rock climbs.

*"In one of the most important scientific treatises of his era, Galileo compared the act of understanding the universe to reading a book in the language of mathematics. By comprehending the symbols and figures of this "grand book," one could avoid wandering about in a dark labyrinth of confusion. This artist's book uses the vehicle of translation—between languages, of text to image, and across domains of language—to illuminate the mathematics and science of linguistics underlying Galileo's text. Handbound and exquisitely printed death metal fanzine from London. "This seventh issue surveys the brutal death metal scene in Colombia and Ecuador, looking at new bands and those that have been stalwarts since the scene developed in the mid-nineties. Bacteremia, Internal Suffering, Suppuration, Mental Apraxia, Extremely Rotten Flesh, Cerenatory, Goretrade, Insalubrity, Carnivore Diprosopus, Infectology, and Animals Killing People. As well as featuring Latin America's most extreme metal, Buried seven features commissions from philosopher Dr. Patricia MacCormack, Craig Boagey, David Stewart, and mangaka Toshio Maeda (Urotsukidōji), Stefan Sadler, Harman Bains, Ruth Angel Edwards and Tamsin Snow." --Buried website. "Buried is more akin to a publication from William Morris's Kelmscott Press, than the average xerox pamphlet, albeit one drenched in gore...Each meticulously produced issue is hand bound and filled with original interviews, illustrations and commissions. The production values aim to be a fitting platform for the craft of the metal and commissions included within." --Publisher's statement.

"I've kept written diaries since 1975, starting in high school. They're my records of thoughts, factoids, and personal dramas, and doodles.

One of these diaries was lost in 1986. I was heartbroken about it and put up "lost diary" notices all over the RISD and Brown campuses in Providence, as you'd do for a beloved pet. As weeks and then months passed I assumed I'd never see it again, but through an unknown series of events this journal was returned to me by a stranger fourteen years later, on Christmas eve, 2000.

I came home from an annual party on Christmas eve and there was a message on the machine, saying, "if this is Jessica Deane Rosner, I have something you want." I said to my husband, "there is only one thing that I know of that has been lost that I would want, and that would be my diary."

Then we played phone tag for the next few days. Finally I reached the man and asked him what the item was, he briefly told me, took my address, and then mailed it to me, from Boston. All the while I worried that it would get lost in the mail.

I know the diary was passed from person to person, going all the way from Providence, RI to Toronto, Canada through a network of art students. I know this because tucked in the front were bits of paper with names and addresses that were not mine.

When the lost diary was found I wanted to use it as a catalyst for drawings that would allow me to use all of the motifs I've explored for the past two and a half decades.

With that idea I began the Diary Project. I'm using a copy of each page of the diary as the foundation for new drawings, which portray a visual stream of consciousness. It's been a journey backwards and it's often painful to read my words again because they sound so immature but it's encouraging to have a chance to recreate my past into a more mature work and I hope, person.

It was exhibited as a work in progress at the David Winton Bell Gallery of Brown University and the complete series was exhibited at the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln, MA in the Drawn to Detail show. There are 72 pages in the series.' [artist statement]

Lost for 14 years, a young woman's dairy...by serendipity...found its way home. Jessica responds to contents of 72 sheets with the evolved/matured skills and life experiences of the missing 14 years. The result is both visually stunning and emotionally complex.

"Influxstructure: A Topography of Ghosts explores macro and micro human systems (both natural and artificial), and how we use the earth and our bodies to communicate and navigate space. When the book is closed, iron filings encased in glass gather tightly over a hidden magnet. When the book is open, the iron filings scatter into formless dust. The map-fold variation structure allows images to be peeled back layer by layer, alternating between the minuscule (synapses, nerves, veins), to the immense (Nazca lines, US Highway systems, atomic bomb test site). Holes in pages peek through to highlight the interconnection of the systems. Text alternates from prose poems to cited research. Influxstructure shifts between the retrospective and introspective in that it examines how remnants from the past overlap and inform our current sensory experiences. Each image is from a vantage point that is either too close or too far away for the viewer to have a complete or clear perspective. There is a connection to be drawn between the monumental Nazca earthworks to our firing brain synapses: How do we determine consciously or unconsciously what is necessary to remember? We have created complex highway structures to move across the earth while our circulatory system moves blood throughout our bodies; we can locate ourselves on a planet of this size, yet cannot pinpoint where we exist within our own bodies?" 23. St. James, Margo; Robbins, Trina [art]. The Street Game: Margo St. James [Original Art] [Women's Movement, Activism]. San Francisco, CA, nd [circa 1975]. Unique. Bright and clean. Red metal frame, black and red beveled matting. Approx 13x10" image size and 18x15" framed. Black pen and ink. Fine in Fine Dustjacket. Framed. (#10406) $7,500.00

The original drawing by Trina Robbins of a board game embodying Margo St. James' life and activities. From Margo's private library. Trina Robbins is the renowned American comics artist, writer and "herstorian". "She was an early and influential participant in the underground comix movement, and one of the few female artists in underground comix when she started. She worked at the feminist underground newspaper It Ain't

Me, Babe. She subsequently established the first all-woman comic book titled It Ain't Me Babe Comix. She became increasingly involved in creating outlets for and promoting female comics artists, through projects such as the comics anthology Wimmen's Comix. She won a Special Achievement Award from the San Diego Comic Con in 1989 for her work on Strip AIDS U.S.A." She was the first woman to draw Wonder Woman. Margo St. James founded the organization C.O.Y.O.T.E. (Call Off Your Old Tired Ethics). The bulk of COYOTE's records are archived at Harvard University [in the Schlesinger Library]. An American self-described prostitute and international activist on and for sex workers rights. Founder and headliner of the [in]famous "HOOKEERS' MASQUERADE BALLS" in San Francisco. St. James ran for President of the United States, as a Republican, in 1980 and for San Francisco Board of County Supervisors in the late 1990s. She was married to Paul Avery (investigative journalist notably of Zodiac killer and Patti Hearst) until his death in 2000. She was instrumental in founding the St. James Infirmary, a medical and social service organization serving sex workers in San Francisco. A remarkable and powerful figure in the women's movement and sex workers' rights.

To speak of the Book of San Cipriano is to speak of one of those mythical texts whose presence becomes effective in many works of scholars of the occult sciences. It is one of the known grimoires or forbidden books that were the result of the interest of many readers throughout history. Jonás Sufurino supposedly transcribes the texts that some spirits have dictated to him. This book includes mythical texts such as Solomon's Clavicle, various invocations, pacts with the devil, exorcisms, the red dragon and the infernal goat, the black hen, the school of spells, the great grimoire and the blood covenant, the magic candle to discover enchantments, a compilation of Chaldean and Egyptian magic, enchantments, sorceries and other spells. The edition is adorned with many illustrations of Saints spread throughout the text. Saints Cipriano and Justina carry behind them a legacy, not only because of their life and martyrdom, but also because of Cipriano's relationship with sorcery and black magic. The legend of Cipriano and Justina is also an example of the confrontation between the magician and the Saint. The popular imagination does not know Saint Cyprian so much for his martyrdom, but for his works of black magic and for attributing to him in large part the authorship of a grimoire known as the Book of Saint Cyprian. A type of book is known as a grimoire where magical knowledge and instructions to perform enchantments are mixed, as well as astrological predictions, spells, spells against the evil eye, invocations to find hidden secrets along with various magic formulas to achieve certain ends.

The Book of San Cipriano, in its many versions, is also known as The Sorcerer's Treasure, The Secrets of Hell, or simply as El Ciprianillo. This treatise has been copied, reissued, added or deleted throughout the winding history of its editions. There are many editions of the 19th century, both from the Iberian Peninsula and from Latin America (especially in Brazil, where more than twenty different reworked and updated versions are known). The success of the book in Brazil is explained by the profusion of Brazilian black magic, while in Spain it is still a kind of bibliographic rarity, although in Galicia and in the north of Portugal it finds a greater diffusion, since in some versions some supposed lists of hidden treasures appear in those lands.--Almanaque. Respectively, this is folk Catholic liturgy and is compatible with many faith-based religious traditions that blur spiritualism and magic.

"A history of the love song, how the contemporary western concept is a decimated shadow of the possibility." [artist book]

"Love Song is a complexly layered silkscreened artist book with a handsewn cover. The text and rich imagery explore and critique the heterosexual, monogamous and eroticized underpinnings of the concept of love, starkly juxtaposing romantic sentiments with commodification. Mike Taylor layers pop culture love song crooners such as Justin Bieber and the Supremes with historical figures depicting love, such as Degas, 16th century religious paintings and ancient Mesopotamia, exploring the constructed concept of love."
